My doctor has been trying to get me on a medication called trandolapril (which has fallen out of favor and now is a generic). I am NOT a believer that one drug will work for everyone, and since I am on some other meds which don't work well I figured I would try a different med. But my doctor is convinced that this one will help me. He seems to think it will help me out of whatever meds I am on now. Anyway, it's not my doctor's fault that I had it misdiagnosed as resistant hypertension and he is willing to take it off my hands and try it as a last resort. At this point I have nothing to lose and everything to gain. He says that it is right for me and that he would want to give it a try. But I must be honest, I think it will take a lot longer than if I had just been diagnosed with it in the first place and would have started with something the doctor recommended to me. So if you have had this disease, I'd love to hear your experience with it and what drugs worked for you. I had it misdiagnosed as resistant hypertension, so I was already on something different. My doctor that is convinced that it will work for me is willing to take off my other meds and try it. I don't want to sound like I'm begging my doctor to try it for me. That's not what I want. I just want to hear what others have to say, and I want to get their take on it and see if it makes sense for me. I guess my question is, have you heard of this drug before? I know some people have mentioned it in threads, but I just want to hear people's first-hand experience with it. I went on it and it worked within days. It works by blocking the conversion of angiotensin I to angiotensin II. The downside is
