PH Public Administration Pdf: Recombinant DNA technology has allowed the in vitro expression and secretion of biologically active recombinant proteins in the milk of transgenic animals. Recombinant DNA technology has also allowed the isolation of biologically active proteins from complex protein mixture. A number of proteins have been expressed and secreted into the milk of transgenic animals including the production of human lactotransferrin (Korenaga et al., Science 269:1484–1486, 1995) and human growth hormone (U.S. Pat. No. 5,670,365) as well as the expression of antigenic chicken delta lactalbumin (see U.S. Pat. No. 6,015,569). Conventional purification processes for secreted milk proteins are generally inefficient and expensive. For example, human lactotransferrin is one of the most costly proteins to obtain because of low yield, low purification efficiency, and high purity and cost. There is therefore a need in the art for methods of producing biologically active proteins with increased efficiency, at lower cost, and increased yield.

Tottenham Hotspur are a very long way away from wanting to splash the cash in the summer and have released a list of their top targets, including Paris Saint Germain attacking midfielder Marco Verratti. The 20-year-old is currently one of the hottest prospects in the world and his electric pace, creative skills and talent oozes out of the turf. The Italy international has made 66 appearances for the French giants in Ligue 1 since his transfer from Parma in 2012, and was so impressed by the way Tottenham were playing in the League Cup final, he shared a message with his brother via social media, saying: “Who’s the mad striker next to you?” In the wake of the defeat, Spurs chairman Daniel Levy declared that next season is “annus mirabilis” and that the club are “going to make sure that happens.” But it’s not just the future that he and Spurs are thinking about; he is also a current target, with Mauricio Pochettino keen to land him for next season. Tottenham aren’t the only side looking for top performers in this year’s summer transfer window, as Liverpool are busy looking for a top playmaker to balance the engine room and make the team harder to beat. PSG are very open to bringing in
