It said the jets fired from the Hakkari region into Syria. “The four Syrian aircraft crashed after suffering damage,” it said. destroy the Islamic State-linked Nusra Front left one serviceman dead on Saturday. The death of the airman inside the US-led coalition's air base in Syria fueled tensions between Ankara and Washington. The US-led coalition had told Turkey that it would not shoot down Russian planes flying over Syria, warning that an incident would escalate between the two NATO allies, the Turkish opposition Nokta news channel reported on Sunday. "We are not looking for any confrontation. We are not looking for a fight with anybody but we are not ready to have a fight with Russia either," a source within the coalition said, according to the report. The coalition also warned Turkey it would "take all necessary measures" against flights in Syria that were aimed at "targeting moderate opposition in Syria." The development comes a day after Turkish warplanes killed two Syrian soldiers, local sources told Reuters, after one Turkish jet was shot down by Syria's army on Saturday. It was the first direct military confrontation between the two countries since they teamed up against Syrian President Bashar Assad's forces two years ago. The Turkish army said later that its air force had
