Nowadays, desktop publishing (DTP) programs (like Adobe InDesign) are used to create high-quality print media. Photoshop has also evolved to become one of the core components of DTP programs, enabling the creation of high-quality print media using a raster image editing and manipulation system. In this chapter, we describe why you may want to use Photoshop for a multimedia project, how you can access the program, and what you can do with it. ## Understanding why you may want to use Photoshop Creating a web-ready document or designing a website is a very different activity from creating a poster or map or poster. The reason is simple. Each of those types of projects requires very specific design elements. Creating an image that's suitable for these various purposes has to rely heavily on the use of specific tools and expertise. Photoshop has become the industry standard for image editing because it enables the creation of many different types of media, based on the creation of a raster image. Here's the deal: To create a photo-quality print or a high-quality video, you have to create a high-quality raster image. When you create a raster image, you must understand how to create layers, use the Lasso tool, create guides, edit content, move items, and use filters. You need to learn how to work with the color settings, create thumbnail images, add special effects and, more importantly, how to get specific colors in an image. This ability is a powerful one and it's the reason why Photoshop has taken off as an industry standard. Let's consider some reasons why you may want to use Photoshop for your multimedia projects.

Follow by Email Monday, 10 May 2010 IT's got that MOT! It was time to get the car on the road again after Easter weekend. The plan was to get the car on the road and drive to the top of Dunragit. It would be an easy drive as the car hadn't driven more than 45 miles per hour for many months. But of course when I got it to the top of the hill and started to drive to the first point...Yep, it was broken again! I'm going to have to go back to the garage and fix the problem. I'd been told by the man who sold it that it had a drive shaft that wasn't working properly. Perhaps that's what was bothering the car all along. On an interesting side note...I had to have my mirror glass changed. It was turning out from the driving that it was badly misted. No amount of windscreen wipers or use of the heater was going to keep them clean. to hide a killer...." "That's impossible, I'm not a killer." "Tell that to the guy who just died." "Relax, it's just a routine check." "P. A:" "Due to the recent string of murders..." "We're placing you under arrest." "A. G:" "Under arrest?" "For what?" "Sir, there are no charges, it's not a murder." "He's being violated." "You can't violate a man." "He's being violated." "On the face of it, it does sound pretty damn technical, doesn't it?" "Do you think you can explain it to me?" "Well, sir, yes, we believe we can." "And we would appreciate it if you'd just sign this form." "A. G:" "Name?" "Miles Ford." "A. G:" "Age?" "36." "A. G:" "Marital Status?" "A." "G:" "A." "A. G:" "Pardon me?" "A." "G:" "A." "A. G:" "Date of Birth?" "7-17-73." "A. G:" "Location?" "Los Angeles." "A. G:" "Unit Number?" "AI 0-3-56256." "A. No, it doesn't take place in a plush conference room. But the five-star experience does happen, and it's measurable and undeniable. In a recent survey of PCMag readers, Crutchfield members confirmed what we already knew. They report frequent phone calls to Crutchfield, that the product information is clear and easy to understand, and that the company's consultants were helpful and made product choices easy. If you think the five-star experience isn't important to your business, you're wrong. Crutchfield is the most important thing that's ever happened to you. As bad as things may look, the survey also revealed that about one in three of our readers have a pretty good experience with us. So, what gives? And how can we make sure everyone has their five-star experience? Your Tools Are Standing Still Upgrading your computer, updating your phone, updating your printer–it all takes time.
