Wife of accused cop killer sentenced to 2nd stint in jail For the second time in less than a week, a wife of a former police officer convicted of killing an Escondido cop was sentenced to jail. Tiffany Porchas got out of custody Wednesday just moments before a judge sentenced her husband, Chase Masterson, to life in prison. In April, a San Diego County Superior Court judge found Masterson guilty of first-degree murder and voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of Escondido police Officer Michael Crain in March 2013. Porchas, 32, received a sentence of 25 years to life in prison for her role in the cover-up of the slaying. She had been taken to jail on April 2 after she violated her parole in a separate case. She was initially sentenced to nearly seven years in prison for two counts of accessory after the fact and two counts of perjury. But she received three more years after a law went into effect in July prohibiting her from receiving credit for time served while awaiting trial. On Wednesday, the judge sentenced Porchas to an additional two years for violating probation in that case. “Twenty-five years to life in prison for a man who gunned down a police officer in broad daylight in front of dozens of witnesses and then hid the murder weapon under his home is not an appropriate sentence,” Assistant District Attorney Mark Ramos said in a statement. “Wife of an accused cop killer should not be sentenced to three-and-a-half times the time in prison that her husband is going to serve.” The official statement from the office of the district attorney said Masterson failed to file fingerprints with the Escondido Police Department after the March 24, 2013, slaying of Crain. Police officers searched Masterson’s home and took his computer. They also discovered the murder weapon, a Glock.45-caliber handgun. Crain was an off-duty Escondido police officer who was patrolling the
