Less than a week after the report surfaced, however, Gucci has dropped a new song from the project, “Gucci on That.” The song is Gucci’s first release since being released from prison. His mixtape My City Prison 3 also contained the song. In the song, Gucci drops the line “I’m a drug dealer, I ain’t selling weed.” This line is in reference to the ongoing debate in the media about whether or not Gucci is a drug dealer. Many in the media have been referring to Gucci as a drug dealer during his rise to the top of the rap game. For Gucci though, he has continuously denied claims that he is a drug dealer, but the line he dropped on “Gucci on That” is implying otherwise. Interestingly enough, Gucci’s first ever official single, “High Road,” was the song his protégé Trap God Jack Nikz used to drop to sell drugs. Nikz was actually arrested earlier this year when a government website revealed that he was selling drugs to high school students. The list of suspects were led by Trap God Nikz and Gucci Mane. A week later, Gucci and Trap God Jack got into a public fight on social media over the allegations of Nikz’s involvement in the drug game.
