macOS. The AutoCAD LT
versions support 64-bit. Each successive version of AutoCAD and
continues to improve. In July

2017, a free upgrade from AutoCAD 2017 to AutoCAD 2018 was available for qualified owners of AutoCAD 2017. AutoCAD 2018 was released in early 2018, and was the first version of AutoCAD to support the Windows 10 Anniversary Update. AutoCAD offers features to create 2D drawings, 3D models, interior design, blueprint and technical drawings, animation, and other CAD

applications. It has been used in numerous products, including personal
automobiles,
medical equipment,
sports

equipment,
consumer
electronics, mechanical equipment and other products.

AutoCAD is

other CAD
applications such as MicroStation.
Autodesk AutoCAD has also been used to create technical drawings for Boeing's 777X

aircraft.

Autodesk has also produced AutoCAD for Windows and Android devices.
AutoCAD is also available in a variety of subscription

options, including as a standalone product and as part of AutoCAD

design capabilities have been enhanced

in AutoCAD 2017
and later
versions.

AutoCAD 2017
was the first version of AutoCAD to support the Windows 10
Anniversary Update, which was released in 2015. The Windows 10 Anniversary Update was the first major revision of the operating system, and brought a more user-friendly interface to Windows.

Released in 2019, the AutoCAD 2019
update introduced new capabilities and user interface
improvements,
and was the first
version of AutoCAD to
support the

Windows 10
Creators Update,
which was released in 2017.

*Micronutrient deficiencies and the reduction of adult mortality in young adults in rural India: evidence from the Young Lives Study. The young adult age group is the most vulnerable group in the population, because they are engaged in the most productive years of their life, when their mortality risk is highest.

Interventions in this age group are crucial to address health inequalities. The present study examined the effect of the use of micronutrient supplements in the young adult age group on adult mortality and the population's well-being. This study used data from the Young Lives study, which is a longitudinal study of pre- and post-natal life circumstances, health and development in children. The analyses used data from 474

children and young adults (16-24 years),
who participated in the baseline survey in 2001
and were followed up 12 years later, from which we could ascertain

whether or not the young adults took the supplements.

Our findings
show that daily supplementation
of adults in the study cohort with iron, folic acid and vitamin A reduced the probability of dying before the age of 25 years

by 26%.

Supplementation
with iron, folic
acid and vitamin

A also reduced the probability of dying in the age group between 25 and 49 years

by 9.7%. Our results also indicate that the use of micronutrient supplements was associated with reduced income. Despite the encouraging results of this study, our findings raise questions about whether increasing the use of micronutrient

supplements
would reduce income
