The present invention relates generally to semiconductor memory devices, and more particularly, to capacitor structures and a method of forming the same. 2. Description of the Related Art In the prior art, a semiconductor memory device such as a Dynamic Random Access Memory (DRAM) may include a capacitor.

The capacitor of the DRAM may include a storage node and a capacitor dielectric layer formed of, for example, silicon dioxide. As the integration density of semiconductor devices increases, memory cell devices having a high capacitance per unit area are necessary. In particular, in order to increase the capacitance per unit area, the thickness of a capacitor dielectric layer formed of silicon dioxide may be reduced. However, when the thickness of the capacitor dielectric layer is reduced, leakage current may be generated when a high voltage is applied to the capacitor. In order to lower the leakage current of the capacitor, a silicon oxynitride layer may be formed between the capacitor dielectric layer and a storage node of the capacitor. The silicon oxynitride layer may have a low dielectric constant relative to the capacitor dielectric layer and may serve as a charge storage node of the capacitor. Thus, a silicon oxynitride layer may be formed by oxidizing silicon during formation of the capacitor. However, when the silicon oxynitride layer is formed in a polysilicon layer, silicon contained in the polysilicon layer may be oxidized. Accordingly, there may be created a problem of reduction in the stability of a storage node formed of polysilicon. Also, when the silicon oxynitride layer is formed after formation of the capacitor, the capacitor may be oxidized during an oxide layer forming process. As a result, the dielectric constant of the capacitor may be increased, and thus, the capacitance of the capacitor may be reduced. Thus, a method of forming a capacitor having a capacitor dielectric layer and an upper electrode, which include a silicon oxynitride layer, in a semiconductor memory device is needed. A method of forming a capacitor having
