What's new in Flying Girls:

- This story is about the adventures of four young siblings who get the chance to work in the airport of Boston. It is during this time that they learn to separate emotion from life. Act I Boston, Massachusetts "I HATE THIS PLACE! Where do I start? All this humidity — I'm running out of places to stuff my head!" Isabella complained to her elder brother, Ricky. "And the people — they think they are such a big deal just because they have an important airport!" "Come on, Isabella," Bruce tried to tell her. "They are just normal people. Can't you see that they are happy and making lots of money for their country?" "It's just because they are rich and at the top of society. I mean, I am not so happy with poverty all the time either. I do not want to spend the rest of my life struggling with too little food and no shelter, just because my parents are superstitious." "Don't forget it, I don't want a life like that either. America is so great and free." "Shut up!" Isabella ordered. "You are just like Dad. Always boasting about how big and how big and how rich. Everything I want America to be, Dad is the great example and I can never please him. I try, but people around here just want everything handed to them on a silver platter. There is no chance of achieving anything in life here. I hate this place!" "Listen, why are you getting so upset? It will all work out all right," Bruce pleaded with her. "Remember, we are your big brothers. We are going to look after you. We are not going to let you do anything stupid now." "Very funny. I wish you would listen to yourself. But it is not so funny when you are not being heard by anyone else." "Let's move aside for a while," Ricky told her. "I want to check something in the newspaper." Four years had passed since Bruce and Ricky had been left at Isabella's home, by their parents, after Isabella's father had lost his job. They had still gone to school, as Isabella, Ricky and his brother, John, were studying for their high school. Isabella was very bright in math, science and English while both Ricky and John would follow in the footsteps of their mother and father by becoming lawyers.
