Resolution: 720*576. MP4.1. Field of the Invention

The present invention relates to a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device, and more particularly, to a method of manufacturing a non-volatile semiconductor memory device having a high performance and a high degree of integration.

2. Description of the Prior Art Recently, the semiconductor devices have been highly integrated and highly developed, and a NAND flash memory device is now widely used as a non-volatile memory device for a personal computer. This non-volatile semiconductor memory device, including a MOS transistor, uses a semiconductor substrate having both a P-type and an N-type conductivity. As the integration of the memory device increases, as the source/drain regions of the MOS transistor are deeply formed, the source/drain regions become thin and the area occupied by the junction in the memory device decreases. As a result, the resistance of the source/drain regions of the MOS transistor increases, thereby causing a reduction of the operation speed of the memory device. In addition, as the spacing between the adjacent source/drain regions increases, the leakage current between the source/drain regions increases. U.S. Pat. No. 6,302,759, issued to Hoang et al. on Oct.

16, 2001, discloses a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device to solve the above problems. In this method, a first source/drain region is formed, and a second source/drain region having a large junction depth is formed in the first source/drain region. The first source/drain region is formed by performing a ion implantation process using the second source/drain region as a mask, and thus, the resistance of the first and second source/drain regions is lowered. Further, the second source/drain region is formed at a side surface of the first source/drain region to enhance the junction depth of the second source/drain region. FIGS. 1A to 1F are cross sectional views illustrating a method of manufacturing a semiconductor device according to the prior art. Referring to FIG. 1A, an isolation film 11 is formed to define an active region on a semiconductor substrate 10. Subsequently, an ONO layer 12, a nitride layer 13, a polysilicon layer 14

The complaints about the sound of the game were heard by Mr. Tropical Storm Barry moved into the Gulf of Mexico on Wednesday while forecasters expect it to become a hurricane after it leaves. As of 10 p.m. ET, the National Hurricane Center said Barry's center was about 165 miles southeast of Panama City, Fla. and was moving west-northwest at 11 mph. Forecasters expect the storm to become a hurricane by Thursday afternoon. Barry's center is expected to move into the Gulf of Mexico Thursday morning and remain there at least through Monday. Several showers and thunderstorms are possible in Florida and Georgia, but the threat of heavy rain is still expected to be highest in the middle and western parts of Florida and Georgia. The National Hurricane Center also said a tropical storm warning was in effect for parts of the Bahamas, Florida and Georgia. Barry could also become a hurricane before it is through. Forecasters expect Barry to be about 200 miles southeast of South Florida on Thursday night and have it move north-northeast at 23 mph. In addition, the NHC warned of large swells along the coast. The storm system is the latest to bring heavy rain to the Deep South. Flooding was reported across Alabama and parts of Mississippi. A tornado was reported Thursday afternoon in Florence, Ala. Forecasters expect Barry to slowly work its way up the East Coast, bring up to 8 inches of rain to parts of the Northeast before moving out into the Atlantic as a tropical depression or tropical storm by Monday. Several airlines halted operations at airports from Louisiana to Delaware.
