1. Use the Enhance command to lighten the image. You don't have to use a filter to brighten an image, but you can play around with the size and strength of the filter. Just make sure that you choose Filter⇒Filter⇒Enhance⇒Lighten, or press Alt+E. The brightness is controlled using a slider, which ranges from 0 to 100 percent. 2. Save the image. Photoshop saves a JPEG or Photoshop saved image (PSD), or you can save your image for the web (Web) format. 3. Open a new image and duplicate the Smart Object (use the Shortcut keystroke Ctrl+J, or choose Edit ⇒ Duplicate), and then scale the Smart Object to fit the new image size (refer to Figure 9-2). The Smart Object is an editable, nondestructive object that stores a color space, levels, and other options. It's used to create and maintain layers. When you duplicate the Smart Object, it creates a copy of the original layers, which you can then edit and use. Use the Align and Reposition dialog box options to align the Smart Object with the exact position of the image layer. 4. Use the Brush tool (W) to apply the new brightness. If necessary, flatten the layer so that the Smart Object is the active layer and paint on the brightness using a black-to-white brush, where the opacity of the brush is 100 percent. When the brightness is 100 percent, the image should be brighter than the original. When it's less than 100 percent, the image should be darker than the original. You can change the color of the brush by using the color box in the Options bar to change the color of the brush and then manually paint over the brightness. 5. Add some text to the logo. Photoshop has a handy text feature that enables you to add, edit, and move text and text lines. The text feature is located on the Expert panel of the Layers panel. When you have added some text, you can use the Select tool (space bar) to select the text and then press the space bar again to activate the Move Tool (V). Drag the image to where you want the text

Bionic Commando In the universe of video games, the Bionic Commando is one of the best-loved by the public but the most reviled by video game critics. Critics point out that it is good but in the wrong genre. It's the only bad game on this list, which seems to imply a greater-than-average attention to detail. In reality, it's not one of the best games of its genre, but it is very fun to play. To blame one of the best bad games for not being the very best bad game is like judging Leonardo Da Vinci for only being able to paint rats. (On the flipside, imagine a Sega CD game where the main character is a giant pink ball of hair, or was it a Sega Dreamcast game? That would be ridiculous.) Controversial factor: Strong. As you know the cost of sunscreen has increased dramatically in recent years. The canister version of Chemical Sunscreens (organic and mineral) contain anywhere from 25-50% perfume! You could get an added benefit of a fragrance free baby, but at a higher cost. Additionally, after testing both options for about a month, I prefer the fragrance free version for my own skin. When my daughter started showing signs of a breakout I switched to the fragrance free product. In the course of time I experienced two breakouts in the space of a week, while she had none. I'm happy to say that things are back to normal. In my opinion, for those with sensitive skin and a baby who doesn't have a lot of tough skin, the fragrance free option is a good choice. If you are sensitive to fragrances in a chemical sunscreen, the organic or mineral option is your best bet, but you should use a purifying option first to see if you are sensitive to the chemicals. If you can't get fragrance free, find a box of sunscreen with an SPF of 35-50. Your baby's SPF should be at least 30. If you can't get that, get a natural zinc sunscreen as it has 20% SPF. This is a great option for people with very sensitive skin. 5 Comments Thank you for the tip on the chemical-free ones. I just cut back on my use of the salon skin-care products and am happy with how well my skin has been performing so far (6 weeks). I just bought some mineral (50%) sunscreens and will keep an eye on the product list to try some when needed. I'm glad you were able to make the switch to fragrance free organic mineral sunscreen. I have been thinking for some time about chemical, mineral and fragrance free sunscreen for my son but have hesitated due to issues with hiding his face for daycare, so I'm glad I found your post. The choices are more and more limited in some stores now days as they have to cut down on the packaging and this has been hard on me as I love the idea of the little container to use in the car. I would have been tempted to buy the mineral version as I have been using it successfully for a few years now, however I do so much research before buying these things it is hard for me to take into consideration the
