Q: Tidbits about graph database design I'm working on a data-driven graph db structure. One of the features I would like to support is "query graph nodes". I am using Neo4j as the graph db engine. Will Neo4j provide something like node property validation in Neo4j? In other words, is there any out-of-the-box way to support the following behaviour Creating nodes with property keys that won't exist in the graph (unsuitable keys) Deleting nodes with unsuitable properties I see there is a way to implement a custom neo4j query 6d1f23a050
