q: f# - use type tag to check type before using it i am trying to use type tag to check the type in the first part of the function. the code below works fine for int, but if i use a different type such as string, then i receive an error: "error fs0175: the value '42' is not a valid value for 'id' because it is not a valid value for type 'id' open system let squareint n = system.math.pow (n, 2) let foobar (x : id) = if x = "int" then squareint x elif x = "string" then printfn "it is a string" else printfn "it is not a string" running this gives the following error: type mismatch. expected id * id -> int but received 'string * string' a: you need to compare the type. let foobar (x : id) = if x.GetType() = typeof then squareint (x.value) elif x.GetType() = typeof then printfn "it is a string" else printfn "it is not a string" q: unable to find a matching overload for 'add' i'm adding a variable with a value and i'm trying to assign the result of that operation to another variable. i've written dim testvalue as integer = ctype(convert.toint32(txtfieldsearch.text), integer) dim count as integer = testvalue.toString.
