Designing is a creative thing and this used to be done before the digital era. The designers had to collect their idea and then simply begin with the preparing of a design. Once the design was saved to the computer it needed to be opened and saved again. So it was necessary to create a lot of hard copies. But today this process has been facilitated with the use of tools which is not only convenient and more powerful, but also minimize the time and effort required to showcase the design.
